Aeolis CaseFile Brings Case Mapping, Deadline Tracking and On-Device AI to Litigation Teams

The Windows app links motions to their supporting papers, hearings and rulings, helps attorneys verify court deadlines, and uses optional on-device AI to test strategy against the case record. New installations include a 30-day Firm + Teams trial.

LOS ANGELES - Nov. 24, 2026 - PRLog -- Neitsch Limited Liability Company announced the launch of Aeolis CaseFile, a Windows application that brings docket review, motion tracking, deadline verification, and case strategy into one workspace. Paid plans start at $390 a year, or about $4.06 per matter for a Solo user handling eight matter intakes or file cleanups a month.

When an attorney takes over a matter, the first questions are often the same. What was filed? What did the court decide? What is due next? Those answers can be scattered across a court docket, a calendar, email threads, and document folders. CaseFile brings them together in a searchable case record that preserves the original documents.

The interactive Case Map connects each motion to its supporting papers, opposition, reply, hearings, and resulting order. A litigator can follow the motion from filing to ruling, open the source documents, and see what remains unresolved. CaseFile also reads supported trial, federal, and appellate dockets and shows the sources behind suggested deadlines so attorneys can verify them before calendaring.

Optional AI runs on the Windows PC. Attorneys can use it to locate pages that address a disputed issue, summarize filings, and test a proposed next move from the perspective of opposing counsel or the court. Case files can be stored on the PC or the firm's own server.
